Everything seems new and yet familiar. I know I haven’t been to this island before, yet, as we walk through the gardens of the abandoned Benedictine monastery, it feels like I already know it. The reason I probably do is that Lokrum Island in Croatia was used as a location for the hugely popular fantasy TV series Game Of Thrones. The island is peaceful – it’s uninhabited except for peacocks and lots of birds, all singing merrily in the cypress and pine trees. In Game Of Thrones, it was part of the fictional city of Qarth – the monastery gardens are where the party for Daenerys Targaryen was held. Her time in Qarth was not happy – and it turns out that in real life the island is said to have a curse which befalls anyone who lives there or stays overnight.
